The course will also focus on the ontological, epistemological or methodological dimensions of its developments and its applications to the respective issues. The class will be conducted in seminar format. All students are required to prepare the weekly readings for class discussion. An in-class closed-books mid-term exam will be held on the 9th week. Students are also required to submit one short term paper (eight thousand words in length) to critically evaluate a book or a group of articles with instructor's prior approval due on the last day of the class.
